Potential Disadvantages of Group Term Insurance

- Taxes. Group term insurance coverage exceeding $50,000 is taxable under IRS Table I (for nondiscriminatory plans).
- Portability. Typically Group term insurance is only temporary coverage, and an individual insured may lose the coverage when he or she leaves the group or is no longer eligible.
- Temporary Coverage. Group term coverage ends upon retirement or termination of employment unless converted to individual coverage, which can be very costly.
- Expensive. Continuing the death benefit coverage after leaving the group can be expensive.
- Spreading Risk. Healthy employees balance out the risk potential in covering those with chronic conditions or low life expectancies.

Potential Advantages of Individual Term Insurance

- Greater Coverage. Term can save you money and allow you to purchase a larger death benefit. Healthy people who pay out-of-pocket costs for group term coverage often pay a higher rate than if they purchased an individual policy.
- Peace of mind. Ability to lock in your insurability today in case of future changes to your health.
- Convertibility. Convertible up to age 70 to a competitive fixed or variable product - without evidence of insurability!
- Guaranteed level premium. Competitive premiums that are guaranteed for 10, 15 or 20 years.
- Combination. Can choose to use a combination of Group term insurance and Individual term insurance to achieve the desired amount of coverage.
